Pediatric Sepsis

Moonjoo Han, MD

Dr. Moonjoo Han is an assistant professor of pediatric critical care medicine at UC Davis School of Medicine. She completed her MD at Rutgers New Jersey Medical School and her residency and fellowship training at University of Pennsylvania and Children's Hospital of Philadelphia. Her research interests focus on pediatric sepsis. Pediatric sepsis continues to pose a significant health care burden, affecting >8% of all critically ill children with a hospital mortality rate as high as 20%. Through her clinical research and quality improvement work, Dr. Han strives to improve identification of modifiable risk factors and timely delivery of therapies in pediatric sepsis.
