

Distinguished Lecture Series in Physiology

Bryan Copits, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor

Pain Center, Department of Anesthesiology
Washington University School of Medicine

“Photoswitchable control of GPCR signaling”

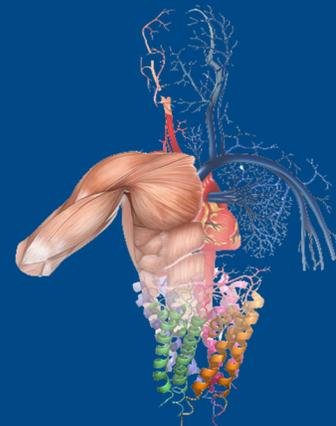

Optical manipulations of genetically defined cell types have generated significant insights into neural circuits that underly a wide range of behaviors. In this seminar I will discuss new tools we have developed to understand neuromodulatory GPCR signaling dynamics in vivo and wireless biocompatible devices to deliver light to complex anatomical structures in freely moving animals.

Monday, April 11, 2022
2133/2135 Tupper Hall and Zoom
12:00pm

April 11

Bryan Copits, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor
Washington University
School of Medicine

Host: Theanne Griffith
tgriffith@ucdavis.edu